AI SAFETY BERLIN · THU 12 NOV 2026 · HOSTED BY AARON PINTO

Your 30-Second AI Safety Intro

When you meet someone in AI safety, they decide in about 30 seconds whether to remember you. "I want to get into AI safety" is everyone's sentence. Today you write yours.

1 · Clarify 10 min, write freely

What I bring. 2 or 3 things I'm genuinely good at, with one piece of proof each.

Where I might fit. My best current guess, held loosely. Technical research · Governance & policy · Field-building & operations · Communications & advocacy · Grantmaking · something else

What I need. The one thing others could give me right now. In your intro it becomes a question for their advice (in a group, an invitation).

2 · Draft 7 min, about 75 words · plain words · one detail they can picture · no "probably"

"Hello, I'm [name]. I spent [time] [doing what], then [what came next]. Most recently, I [your most relevant, specific thing]. [Your thread: what you do best]. Now I'm bringing that to AI safety[, exploring X and Y]."

One-to-one ending: "[A question asking for their advice]?" Group ending: "If you [run or work on X], or know someone who does, let's chat!"

3 · Practice trios, 3 rounds of 6 min

Speak for 30 seconds → each listener gives one strength and one fix → say it again with the fix.

Clear: could I repeat their direction in one sentence?	Specific: did I hear one concrete thing they did?	Ending: do I know what to talk to them about next?

Focus per round: 1) clear and specific · 2) slow down, pause before your question · 3) group version: swap your question for an invitation, land it, then stop

4 · Your LinkedIn headline 5 min · About 10 min (overleaf)

Headline. The line under your name, shown everywhere you appear.
"[Target focus] | [Past role as proof] | [2 or 3 searchable skills]" · Students: "[Degree] in [field] | Researching [specific problem] | [Skills]"

4 · Your LinkedIn, continued About 10 min

About. Same story as your spoken intro, rebuilt for skimming, in the first person:

1. Hook. A specific claim or moment, not a summary of yourself. Only the first 3 lines show before "see more."

2. Story and proof. Why AI safety, and how your past connects. Back it with numbers, or projects, a thesis, evals or a fellowship.

3. Now and next. What you're working on, in searchable keywords. Who should contact you, about what, and how.

5 · Your Swapcard profile going to EAGx? Fill it in tonight

About me. Who you are and what you bring, plus one proof point.

How I can help. 2 or 3 things you can genuinely help with.

Hoping to get. Name who you want to meet.

6 · Your outreach message someone you haven't met · send one this week, or tonight if going to EAGx

"Hi [name]! Glad to connect. I'm a [past role]-turned-[current role] moving into [area]. [Their project or recent news, from their profile]. Would love to hear [one specific question], or happy to share [what you can offer]."

7 · After you meet someone

1. Connect on the spot. LinkedIn (or whatever they use), before you part. The app has a QR code for this.

2. Make a note right away. Their name, what you talked about, anything you promised.

3. Follow up within 48 hours. Short, specific, at most one ask.

"Hi [name], great meeting you at [event]! I really enjoyed our chat about [specific thing]. [Optional: here's the link I mentioned.] I'd love to stay in touch. [Optional, one only: Would you be open to a 20-minute call to hear more about [their work]? / Would you be up for introducing me to [person] you mentioned?]"

Give before you ask: a link, an article or an intro of your own goes a long way.
